In September 1952 all discharged troops in Kiangsi received orders from the Central and South China Military Area Command to return to the armed services, and the original time limit of three months for response to these orders was reduced to one month.

Comment. According to a report received there was large-scale demobilization in Kiangsi from February to mid-August, with more scheduled at the end of August. This information was consistent with reports from
